Hollywood predicted our fate in 1981 movie

A scene from the 1981 movie My Dinner with Andre laid it all out for us, our future human condition under a coming beast system, in terms that everyone could understand.

In that movie one of the characters provides a chilling perspective on the world from his vantage point in 1981 and where he saw it going. As it turns out, we can say with confidence, 42 years later, that whoever wrote this script was spot on. It's so accurate, in fact, that one has to wonder if the CIA fed this part of the script to Hollywood.

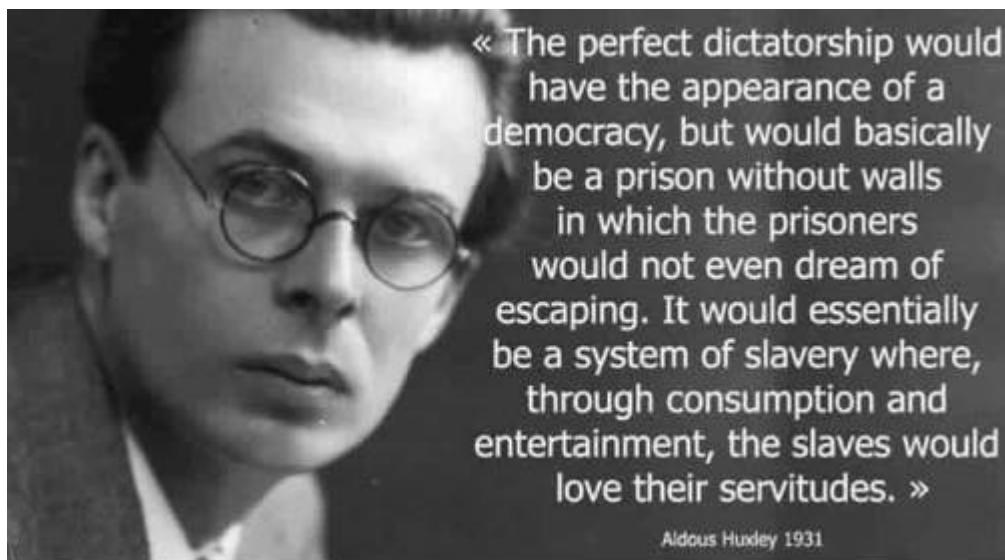

Take a look at the below 3-minute clip from My Dinner with Andre:

One of the best reposts I will ever make. The most profoundly truthful scenes in any movie ever made. This is from the early 80s. Just in time for 1984.

The scene above seems to be predicting a future technocracy in which the inhabitants have lost their inherent humanity. They are no longer humans but transhumans, a form of hybrid beings who, through technology, can be conditioned to think and act in whatever way their programmers, a small group of globalist elites, demand.

The character's monologue in the above video clip reminded me of Aldous Huxley's 1931 comment about "The perfect dictatorship" and how it would have the "appearance of a democracy, but would basically be a prison without walls," a slave-state within whose walls the slaves — kept entertained, dumbed down, and drugged up — would not think of escaping. They trust their government, and all authority figures, implicitly. Anyone who does question the official narrative is seen as too scary and troublesome. They must be isolated and removed before their uncomfortable questions start to spread to others and disrupt the carefully cultivated hive mind.

Are you a candidate for humanity 2.0's new breed of transhumans? If you answer yes to more than two or three of the following questions, you may want to fill out an application and submit it to Klaus Schwab at the World Economic Forum.

- Are you extra careful to "stand on the X"? You know, that sticker on the floor of your favorite big-box store that was allowed to stay open during the last lockdown?

- Do you strap up on command with your toxic cancer-causing material, forcing you to breathe in your own noxious carbon dioxide?
- Do you roll up your sleeve for a doctor-recommended, media-recommended injection at various intervals during the year?
- Do you believe a college education is still necessary to “get ahead in life?”
- Do you take every drug your doctor prescribes without questioning the side effects and performing your own independent research?
- Would you ever consider leasing a plug-in electric car as your primary mode of transportation?
- Do you believe cash is “dirty” or “germy” or “inconvenient,” something to be avoided whenever possible?
- Do you consider foreign travel an essential component of a happy lifestyle?
- Do you need to live in a city to be happy?
- Do you believe eating meat is dangerous to the environment?
- Would you rather shop, worship, and pursue friendships online rather than in person?
- Do you consider roadblocks, tracking devices, digital ID checks, surveillance cameras and facial recognition a normal, even beneficial aspect of modern society?

If you answered yes to more than three of the above questions you may need to ask yourself another question: Could I own nothing and learn to like it if all my needs were taken care of by technology?

These are the folks who will cooperate with their own pre-planned demise. They will board the busses and the trains, never questioning the stated destination.

They will not prepare for hard times. Why bother, they say, the government will have our backs if it ever gets as bad as you “doom and gloomers” predict.

I would advise these folks to take note of what’s happened in Maui in the aftermath of the horrific fires of August 8. Three weeks later, the U.S. government is reportedly nowhere to be found. While you’re at it, go to East Palestine, Ohio, and ask the residents there how much help they got from the federal government.

While we’re on the subject of prophetic movies, here’s another favorite clip of mine from the 2016 film Amerigeddon.

If you are one of these people, I implore you to wake up. We are in for a wild ride over the next 12 to 15 months, especially in the U.S., where we are heading into another in the latest series of theatrical productions otherwise known as the presidential elections. Unprecedented scenarios tend to play out during these dramatic reenactments every four years. Let's not let this puppet show distract us from what is really happening in the physical and spiritual realms.

Henry Kissinger

” a strong America is the only thing standing in the way of New World Order.”

Hello Leo,

I remember George Bush senior saying with absolute certainty that they would establish a new world order.

He talks about forging a new world order then he says “When we are successful, and we will be, with a knowing chilling smirk.

In another speech bush talks about the new world order and he says

“We are Americans, part of something larger than ourselves”

America destroyed their international credibility with their botched foreign policy.

But now the destruction of America has been internalised. There will be no escape from this destruction. What little is left of genuine political opposition will be ruthlessly wiped out and democracy will be replaced.

I've said before that I don't see America being mentioned in the bible. I believe that America will cease to be a world power. Instead I believe it will be absorbed into the NWO under the united nations in tandem with WHO and will play a diminishing role as an independent world super power.

But I believe the greatest concentration of demonic power is in Europe and I believe that Europe will be the platform for the rise of the man of sin via the Vatican and the Papacy.

Just some of my opinions on the matter.

“Isolating kids in lockdowns is child abuse and parents need to stand up not comply.”

I agree 100%.

I live downtown where people tend to be non compliant. This has turned out to be an advantage during the lockdowns.

The parents ignored the Covid restrictions and the children were out in the courtyard mixing and playing as usual. The children were having lots of fun, which is so important to their development.

And of course the bible predicts this in the end times. Information will be as never before in history, now we know via the internet. And one does not need to go to a church or watch online, but allow the indwelling of the Holy Spirit to enlighten and give one understanding, peace and grounding. The book by Floyd G. Brown, Counter Punch, gives an amazing example of current ground level workings that can help tremendously. Read chapter 20 first. Also, term limits at the federal level will have a tremendous dominoes effect. Doing away with most of the inane lobbyists. This will give us all a reprieve before the end times, which the Lord has told me, since my thirties, that I will be alive to experience. Be of good heart and cling to the words of the Lord.

Peace be with you, Renee

It's worse than neglect, according to many sources it is intent. They also say it will be one disaster after another. People's homes are disappearing as well as their lives. They are being trapped and exterminated. Did you hear about the gas problem in Florida just as they told the people to leave? Not enough have dropped yet by plan A, so I guess now they want to roll out the rest of the alphabet including another round of jabs. It looks like precarious times are ahead for sure and all is not what it seems. They have all these camps ready for the displaced in these disasters too. Did you hear about how all things blue escaped the fires in Lahaina and they are saying it is due to color frequency, and that the rich and famous just so happened to have blue roofs at the time? I'm curious to see what happens with the hurricanes in Florida now!

It's a small group that messes up the world but a magnitudes larger one that doesn't seem to catch on. If anyone is interested, there's a new Indie movie out called "Jones Plantation" an allegory about going from chattel slavery to debt slavery.

Es ist unglaublich, wie ein Volk, sobald es unterworfen ist, sofort in ein so vollständiges Vergessen seiner Freiheit verfällt, dass es kaum noch dazu gebracht werden kann, sie wiederzuerlangen, und so leicht und bereitwillig gehorcht, dass man zu sagen geneigt ist, dass dieses Volk nicht so sehr seine Freiheit verloren als vielmehr seine Versklavung gewonnen hat.

Am Ende werden die Menschen den Herrschern zu Füßen liegen und sagen:

“Macht uns zu euren Sklaven, aber füttert uns”

Die Sklaven werden ihre Knechtschaft lieben.

There was only about 3% who stood up to the British in the beginning of this experiment. I served in the Marine Corps and 30 years in LE. There will be those again. It's just too bad that so many have given in or just checked out. I just signed up to help with Col. Douglas MacGregor at this site: col@ourcountryourchoice.com. This thing hasn't gone to blows yet and hopefully it doesn't have to; I'm trying this first. God Bless everyone, I hope you all get to church and go often.

What dismayed me so much about the Covid hysteria was how so many quit acting human. We are warm blooded, social creatures. So many people seemed happy and contented isolated in sterile apartments, shunning their fellow man and determined to snuff out every human face in view. As if they enjoyed viewing other men and women as nothing but disease carriers or pathogen factories. The careless cruelty they showed children made me sicker than the Delta variant at its worst.

A short story by E.M. Forster, The Machine Stops, was also an alarmingly prophetic tale written in the early 1900's.

I don't like large cities, prefer cities a decent size with amenities, medical specialties, decent shopping and restaurants, so that travelling elsewhere wouldn't be necessary. Buying some things online because stores don't carry everything. Church online: pick and choose preaching, subjects, (ligonier ministries: good reformed doctrine) online is suitable for some, some fed up w/ inconsistancies over covid issues in churches, causing division, and/or some I know who are also online/too far to travel to their denomination, older and like solitude. I have met friends online and had to ditch a few-not as informed as I'd like (all over 50). Some of us talk on phone. Police have no right to search car,etc. even if a light needs replacing, it is pure harassment other than to tell person they have a broken light. license plate camera blocking (clear plastic) doesn't block person in car from seeing license plate driving, just camera mounted up high.

Might I suggest downloading sermons or purchasing them on CD's? We may be denied access to the internet in another year or so. Or only allowed it on Their terms.

Rachel, we downloaded some several years ago, have a good basic set, some prophecy sermons (Perry Stone, Cleveland, TN) I watch on you tube but he may be banned for speaking out on globalist info. Many would hate not having internet, watching old movies, music videos 50's 60's, etc, travel channels, researching medical info you tube drs, phys. therapy exercises for bursitis and other issues, weather info. on storms, and emailing. Kids need interacting w/other kids outside play time, whereas older people play bridge or board games, they will have to find other things like before computers. Isolating kids in lockdowns is child abuse and parents need to stand up not comply.

“My Dinner with Andre” is a great movie. It had a cult status, maybe still does. Such an unusual conversation between two friends over dinner. Comic, absurd and yet profound. And sooo eloquently prophetic—as demonstrated in the clip Leo included in this article. Pay strict attention to what is being said in that clip.

This beastly evil has been drifting in among us like a fetid, foggy miasma for a very long time. So many things that were once considered unthinkable just a few years ago has been normalized in our daily lives. Absurdity after absurdity, yet we’ve “accepted” it all. We go along. I remember several years ago at a commuter train station overhearing a black janitor commenting on a vandalism incident that happened there that day. He said: “You know, no one does anything about it. Crimes like this happen, but they just accept it these days. They all just accept it.” I felt that it really summed up the abyss of chaos that our culture has been slowly sliding into. What happens, just happens as if fated, and we accept it. Is it out of indifference or not knowing what to do, or feeling as if our wings are clipped to not act except to let the “authorities” handle it (which they don’t or won’t). So we accept that state of hopeless helplessness and now paralysis of soul is normalized. How did this happen to a people that were once independent and vital??? I think the movie clip explains it very well.

We see what the “authorities” are doing or rather not doing in disaster areas like East Palestine, Ohio or more tragically in Lahaina. In Lahaina, the “authorities” are now draping black curtains over the area and forbidding any information, videos or photos of the disaster to get out to public view. Of course, this is an obscene cover-up. Cover up how many children got incinerated right to ashes (2000 still missing?). Cover up that developers had their eye on the area. Any one want to lay bets whether the surviving residents, most of them poor, will be allowed to return and rebuild? I’ve watched some of the local council televised meetings with survivors and it’s pathetic that they expect their rotten corrupt government (which contributed to and badly handled the disaster, causing many unnecessary deaths) will still come to their rescue in the aftermath.

Are there other places being targeted for “development” via catastrophe?? Yet the media mostly gaslights us about the disasters and quickly distracts us with nonsense so that we accept it as if rampaging horror happens by chance and we are reduced to wait in vain for the “authorities” to save us. Wait and wait and wait. And then finally accept things as they are. So things get worse and worse.

How many lies we accept cages us in a prison we will never be willing to escape. Keeping the truth alive in ourselves and in everyone’s face is our only path to freedom.

Robots indeed.

We started seeing this manifest in the late 90’s with on-set of the internet. Sameness, such as group-think.

Communication’s being the catalyst IMO.
